St. Louis Pitching Star Declares He

Is Tired of Base Ball. pitcher for the St. Louis Nationals, has retired from the game, according to a statement issued by Schuyler Britten, president of the club, yesterday. ST. LOUIS, June 30 .- Harry Sallee, "Sallee told me that he had quit the game," the statement says. "I wanted to reinstate him, because we wanted him, but he told me that he was tired of the game. Sailee did not ask to be traded. I had an offer of $10,000 cash for him, and New York wanted to give me Tesreau for him, but I turned down both propositions. I hope he changes his mind."

little man" from Indianapolis, gave Pittsburgh, a sound thrashing at Washington Park, Brooklyn, last night in a ten-round bout that thrilled 20,000 spectators from start to finish.

Dillon, called the "giant killer," gave one of the most spectacular exhibitions of gameness seen in a New York ring his stout right arm. Dillon, knowing this, varied from his usual fighting position by inclining his body a bit side-ways at almost all times so that he was out of range of the piledriver.

The spectacular way in which Dillon showed his superiority in the first two rounds made the crowd totally unprepared for Moran's big bid in the third. It was here that the Pittsburgher first employed the trick that nearly carried the day for him. Caling on his immense strength, he forced Dillon by sheer weight back to the ropes. Dillon Saves Himself by Clinching. The little man clinched to save himself; the referee pried them apart and once more Moran literally pushed his day and Brooklyn won, 2 to 1. adversary clear across the ring. He jammed Dillon out of the ropes again, and continued to beat in with the same mighty fist. There was plenty of power in the blows, but Moran lacked the accuracy to lan/2 on a vital spot.

Suddenly Dillo, lashed out with both hands to Moran's face, but he left himself wide open and a crashing right hander, more active than the others, knocked him into a reclining position on the ropes in Moran's corner. He hung there a moment as the referee seemed preparing to count him out, but instead of falling to the floor his head cleared, he stood erect and chased Moran to the middle of the ring with what little strength remained. The bell was a most welcome sound to him at that instant.

After recovering, Dillon was content

HONOR BIRTH OF BASE BALL.

National League Officials Speak at Celebration at Cooperstown.

They SATISFY! -and yet they're MILD

A special base ball commission ap-pointed by the National and American leagues in 1907 declared that base ball was first played in Cooperstown. This
